

WOMAN'S THREAT TO KILL BRICKLEY RELATED IN SUIT

Disclosure Made With Judgment Filed Against Old Football Star.

It was alleged yesterday in papers filed with a judgment against Charles E. Brickley for $10,000 that the sister of the man who obtained the judgment had threatened to invade the Harvard Club and publicly horsewhip the former Harvard football star unless he paid. On another occasion, the papers allege, she talked of putting a bullet through his brain.

The woman is Mrs. Miriam Reinhardt, sister of Joseph S. Jackson of No. 112 West 110th Street. Mr. Brickley's suit showed he lent Mr. Brickley $10,000 on a note, Dec. 31, 1920. The note matured March 31 last, and Mr. Jackson complained that the maker failed to pay any part of it.

that followed are in the affidavit of Charles S. Sinshemer, attorney, of No. 51 Chambers Street, who was retained in the suit. According to Mr. Sinshemer, Mr. Brickley told him March 28, over the telephone, that he was without funds and requested a week's time to settle. Mr. Sinshemer asserts he replied that he would have to have $2,500 by April 2. The $2,500 was not forthcoming, he states, and suit was brought against Mr. Brickley when it was learned that Charles E. Brickley & Co., brokers, were about to dissolve.

Mr. Sinshemer swears his client was very ill of heart trouble. Mrs. Reinhardt and her mother called upon him, the lawyer continues, and announced her intention of appealing to Mrs. Brickley to pay the note out of her own funds. She threatened, Mr. Sinshemer avers, that if Mrs. Brickley would not amicably adjust the matter she would go to the Harvard Club and publicly horsewhip the defendant. When she visited him again, March 28, the attorney says she told him that unless the note was paid by Brickley "she would put a bullet through his brain."

Sinshemer says he dissuaded her. Mrs. Reinhardt came to him again, says Mr. Sinshemer's affidavit, and told him her brother's doctor had said it would mean her brother's death if he continued the action. Mr. Sinshemer says he accepted $50 for his services, believing the action was to be dropped. Then, he says, Mrs. Reinhardt and her brother obtained an order substituting Lesser Brothers as their attorneys. This firm obtained the judgment. Mr. Sinshemer applied for additional fees, but his claim was denied by Supreme Court Judge McAvoy.

Buyways

Some dazzling bracelets and necklaces of brilliant, which have just arrived, so closely resemble genuine gems they call to mind a touching tale of De Maupassant's, where in Marie, the beautiful young wife of a poor clerk in the Ministry, lost a necklace of diamonds which she had borrowed from a rich friend for a state occasion.

Though pained beyond words at the loss, the young couple bravely replaced the necklace with one identical, secured by issuing a note that would absorb the earnings of both for years to come, diamonds being then fabulously high in price. The owner of the necklace was not informed of the loss and replacement.

Years later, Marie, bereft of youth and beauty through years of toil, one day encountered her friend of the necklace. As the last installment had been paid on the substitute, she need keep her secret no longer. She confessed to the replacement, only to learn that the one she had lost was paste!
